A TRAINING OPPORTUNITY

PROTECTING OUR CHILDREN IN CYBERSPACE

LOST IN CYBERSPACE

On November 29, 2006, state agencies will present Lost in Cyberspace, an opportunity for local leaders to learn about current trends in the exploitation of children via the Internet. Cyber bullying, sexual exploitation and the danger of blogs will be discussed, as well as strategies and actions that parents can learn to protect their children and monitor their on-line activities. Attendees will be given the opportunity to partner with these agencies to bring this training to their counties.

Attorney General Troy King stated, “ We used to think that our children were safe in their homes. Today they are not. The Internet has opened our homes to a wealth of knowledge, most of which is good and useful. However, as more and more individuals have Internet access, the opportunity for criminals to use this tool for despicable acts has greatly increased. We must all work together to protect those who cannot protect themselves - our children. Please join me in this training opportunity to learn from the experts.”

Who Should Attend:

Leaders of local PTA

School board members

School administrators, teachers and counselors

Members of Children’s Policy Councils

Local law enforcement officers

Members of the local clergy

Business and community leaders
